Andrew,

This is a baseless objection. Plaintiff failed to comply with the basic disclosure requirements of Rule 26 regarding Mr. Weinstein's regression analysis, which you've never disputed. To attempt to alleviate the prejudice to Defendants without involving the Court, we proposed that Dr. Becker issue a supplemental report on regression, to which you readily agreed. Now that you've seen Dr. Becker's supplemental report, you are attempting to back out of your agreement for no apparent reason other than to try to prevent Dr. Becker from being able to testify regarding the gross flaws in Mr. Weinstein's regression analysis. In any event, the simplest and most appropriate way to deal with this seems to be to remove the issue from the case, as I originally suggested. We will proceed with our motion to strike Mr. Weinstein's regression opinions based on Plaintiff's failure to disclose supporting data and, now, gamesmanship.

Regards,
Jeff

Counsel,

We object to the supplemental report by Becker. You previously requested an extension so Becker could address the regression analysis data that you believed was not provided to you in a timely manner. We made very clear that we were willing to accommodate your request so long as Becker strictly limited his supplement to the data. Becker did not do so. He purports to address all aspects of Mr. Weinstein's regression modeling itself – that is something that Becker could have done in his opening report. Indeed, Becker addresses the regression analysis data only in passing in a handful of paragraphs. Defendants will need to seek leave to supplement. Thank you.

Best regards,
Andrew Choung
